

MY TREATMENTS

It is important to keep good records of the different treatments you receive, where they were given, and the treatment duration. This will allow you to better describe your clinical situation to other healthcare professionals that you encounter. For chemotherapy, make sure you list the names of the specific medications and how they were delivered. For radiation therapy, be certain to mention the type of radiation received and the specific area that was treated.

The information is most helpful when it is detailed.
